A 10x10 grid of black dots on a white background. The dots are arranged in a sparse, abstract pattern, forming various shapes and clusters across the grid. The pattern is non-random and suggests a complex structure, possibly representing a specific data set or a stylized image.

- living in the city- living in the countryside

A 10x10 grid of black dots on a white background. The dots are arranged in a sparse, non-uniform pattern, suggesting a matrix with many zero entries. The distribution of dots is as follows (row by row, from top to bottom):

- Row 1: 15 dots
- Row 2: 20 dots
- Row 3: 25 dots
- Row 4: 20 dots
- Row 5: 15 dots
- Row 6: 20 dots
- Row 7: 25 dots
- Row 8: 20 dots
- Row 9: 25 dots
- Row 10: 20 dots

The pattern of dots is complex and non-symmetric, with some rows having more dots than others. The dots are small and black, set against a white background.

A 10x10 grid of 100 dots. Each dot is replaced by a small cluster of black dots of varying sizes and shapes, creating a textured, noisy appearance. The clusters vary in density and shape, some being small and tight, others being larger and more spread out. The overall effect is a noisy, pixelated version of the original 10x10 grid.

Agree? Disagree?

Explain why and give examples.

Friends must have the same interests I agree. Friends should have the same interests because they can talk about the same things and have fun together. For example, if two friends both like soccer, they can play together and talk about the game. If they don't have the same interests, they might not have much to talk about and might not have fun together.
I disagree. Friends can have different interests and still be friends. For example, one friend might like soccer and the other might like reading.
They can still be friends and talk about their different interests. Friends don't have to have the same interests to be friends.

Discuss with your friend!

People use mobiles and computers too much.
I agree. For example, many people use their mobiles to check the internet, send messages, and take photos. They also use computers to work, study, and play games. This is bad because it can be addictive and waste a lot of time. I think people should use them less often and spend more time doing other things like sports or reading.
